The importance of maintaining a good vitamin D status in pregnancy has been recognized since the late 1980s, yet a large proportion of pregnant women are vitamin D-deficient at the start of pregnancy. The optimal vitamin D status in pregnancy is controversial, with studies reporting adverse pregnancy outcomes in those who are vitamin D deficient and studies that have not shown an association. In the adult population, observational studies have suggested that vitamin D supplementation reduces fracture risk, while in pregnancy the existing data indicate that supplementation may reduce the risk of preeclampsia. Randomized controlled trials have shown increased risks of birth defects and preterm birth with supplementation. There is a need for more high-quality randomized controlled trials in pregnant women to further clarify the dose-response relationship and the risks and benefits of vitamin D supplementation in pregnancy.Q: loop database cursor in java I'm new to Java. I have a database with four columns. Column 1 will contain the name of the company, Column 2 will contain their address, Column 3 will contain a list of employees and Column 4 will contain their phone number. I have a java class that extends jframe which I use to take an input from the user and then I call the accessDatabase method from the main() function and it searches through the database table that I specify, and when it finds the input company, it adds it to the list, and then it prints the name, address and phone number of the company that's at the front of the list to the JLabel, and then it will print a list of employees. I'm trying to print the employees list in a loop so that it will print each and every record in the database. It works fine. My problem is that when it loops, it prints me the company's name 5 times instead of 1 time. Any help would be much appreciated. The accessDatabase: public void accessDatabase(){ try{ Class.forName("sun.jdbc.odbc.JdbcOdbcDriver"); Connection con = DriverManager.getConnection("jdbc:odbc:Driver={Microsoft Access Driver (*.md
